

THE KANSAS CITY TIMES, SATURDAY, JULY 3, 1937,
THE THREE DEMOCRATIC LEADERS WHO THE GRAND JURY REPORTS RACKED RONDS AND COUNSEL FOR VOTE FRAUD DEFENDANTS.

WILLIAM D. BOYLE—Factor in party circles and prominent contractor, his reply to the grand jury report, in part: "I put up $15,000 bond money in the first case. . . . My nephew, John Drummond, was one of the defendants. . . . I never would have felt right if I hadn't put up the bonds for my nephew and the others. . . ."

THOMAS J. PENDERGAST—The Democratic boss replied to the grand jury report before he left on a vacation last night: "There has not been any secret about it. . . . Everything contained in that report is true, except I do not know what amount was advanced as expenses. . . . If there is anything wrong about it, why don't they say so?" A picture of Pendergast taken last December, shortly after his recent illness.

JAMES M. PENDERGAST—

Nephew of the organization chieftain, he said last night: "I can't see why the matter is looked upon as a surprise. I've been putting up money and getting lawyers for the last six months."
