VIII. Depicting the Evolution of Negro Music in 5 Episodes

A. First Episode—Barbarism—1620

The music of the native African was usually the accompaniment to his barbaric dances or some heathen rites.

B. Second Episode—Slavery

The spirituals, the only native American music, were born out of the toil and suffering that the slaves endured through long years of bondage. They express the faith and hope of a praying people.

"Couldn't Hear Nobody Pray" Spiritual

C. Third Episode—Freedom—1865

With the emancipation of the Negro his songs became more jubilant. He is rejoicing in his long awaited freedom.

"Rise, Shine" Traditional

D. Fourth Episode—Modern

Much of the modern music expresses the exuberant spirit of a people who can drink as deeply of the joys of life as they have of the sorrows. There is a rhythm and a swing to it that is fascinating.

"Swing Along" Will Marion Cook

E. Fifth Episode—Justice

In spite of the seeming light heartedness of the Negro he is above all else a grateful people. Much of his music expresses praise and thanksgiving to God.

“De Lord Dat Lives on High”

J. Hartwell Cook
